| Good morning all,

I've added Sue Salamoff since this is timely.

was walking to the train this morning and a coyote crossed my path on 135.

It emerged from Randall CT at 6:05 am, crossed 135 and entered the yard between 56 & 54 West Central St. It was fairly large and looked like a husky at first glance. 30 seconds more have run into it. He didn't see or look my way. There is a tall hedge row that blocks Randall CT as you are walking towards downtown.

ran into my neighbors a short distance later at Washington and 135 as they were walking their dog. They saw one earlier at or near Washington St. Not sure if it was the same one. My seen one on Tucker Street recently and now carries a golf club on the morning walk.

The Humane Society site says coyote-human attacks are rare. Further down this email, someone is making a claim about protecting family members from attack. Dealing with the coyot but I think the Town should have a Wild Life expert on hand so that it doesn't turn into hysterics. I was startled, certainly, and wear a bright headlamp for many purposes - specifically, in Cars, 2. Skunks and 3. Other people so I don't startle them in the dark).

Hope this helps.
